GENERAL COSTER.

Custer's strong points as a soldier were his almost unapproachable bravery, his cash, ardor, confidence, and his self-possession and comopsure that were never saaken in the most cesperate resorts. If have seen Cus er in circumstances when it was hare for me to believe that he was human; and am confident that when werwhelmed and surrounced in that ravine, and staring death squarely in the face, he loaded the Remington rifle he always carried as coolly and aimed it as accurate y as if he had been target-shooting on the partie ground at his jost. Vet I have seen tear; in his eyes, that were drawn out by the suferings of a cog. One of the tender sounts of his nature was his sympathy for nutes. He never allowed an anima to be abused or to suffer in any way if it was in his power to prevent it. I have seen him dis mount men from half starver, horses; and have heard him order soldiers bunished for abusing beasts. It used to be a remark commonly made in his command that Custer wou of turn a wound ed so dier out of an ambulance to et a sick cog ride. But this is an exaggeration.

Nany people have the ice it has Custer was a rough, swag gring, swearing, crunken trooper, He was just the opposite. He was as cainty a beau (in ladies) society, and as entertaining a guest at a dinner table, as one of en sees. For vears, he has never drank a croo, even the lightest wines. He used to, in the earlier days of the war, but to his wife's sweet influence he surrendered the habit, and became not only temperate nim-e f, but the spost e of temperanced He never swore nor would be a ow an oath, o be uttered in his presence. I have heard him cobuke his officers many a time for swear ing, and for one of his so diers to utter an oath in its learning was the grossest sort of insubordination. Cava ry and profat ity seem some row to be co essential, but it was not so in Custer's case. Another anoma y was kint he never used tobacco in any form. I in of a trooper with out at plug and a libe in his pocket! With one of the sweetest, gentlest, beigntest women in the foodd for a wife; in a house on the frontier, my tions and the rudeness of half civilization; with a library where Ruskin lay beside a revolvvelvet carpet was strewn with half curee pear ane wolf seins; where de icace ade curtains heads and stuffed owls ornamental the piano, Custer lived, a lustrating in a msc f the anomaly of a unter and itterateur; in associate of savages and a patron of art. He was one of the best marksmen in the army and one of the best. norsemen. Marve ous stor es are ole of his eats in both particulars. Le had a mest as ne O cest 300t and Shore many guns as there were varieties of manufacture, and his stable was filed with the best ooked forses in the land.

Custer's pretensions to teraffure were not great, alt joug i ne wrote a great cea for paplication and wrote we l. is book; ", ife on the Plains," which was original y bub ished in the form of monthly papers for the cialuxy, was a here passime, to occury the one y days of a winter's imprisonment on the contier, and his subsequent publications were made mere y or ie same reason. is ife was a succession of novel and interesting experiences, and he had the faculty of te ling them graducally. It was his intention to write a series of personal reminiscences of the war, the first charter of which-emproicered successin suit, with his red neck- as the French gauzes, and gent emen go into tie, ant the remainder of his a my cress, with ecs acies over their perfect, wooden manufacture.

A REMINISCENCE OF HAYES. A Was 1 ngton correspondent of the Cincinnati Enquirer reca s the following incident in the career of Governor Layes: I first knew Rutherford 3. Hayes when he came to Cincinour par. le came frienc ess, poor, and withou parrons. I saw him, for I was on the pench b ue eyed, heavy-browed young man, evicently shy and no tope a. Que day a wretered it lot girl was arraigned for murcer. She was the most forlors specimen of unfinished humanity ever charged with crime. Her face, horriby out of crawing, was wit jout a spark of intelligence. She gived upon the court as if she were some cumb anima making a feeb e attemp to comprehence the meaning of whit was going on arounc, and of which she seemed to have a vague fee ing that she was the centre and one o nect of at ention. She was poor and without an attorney to defend her. I became necessary to secure some one. "Who shall it be?" asked udge Thur nan, of us, his associates, for it wasin the district court. I suggested the pale colonice as a modest sort of a man, who seemed to be without practice, and Thurman responded. "Cer ainy; who is he?" We had to assome cerk, who told us Rutherford 3. Layes; and so Y : ayes was called upon to defend the poor le iot. He did so in such a masterly manner that he not only acquitted the girl, but won the admiration of the entire bar and mice an opening for a ucrative practice."

It has timed a east two nundred and forty five years, and is at the time, frequently sitting alone, a pale, astilla good tilnekeeper. It was brought from Englane by the Rev. ohn Eliot, the a sostle to the lice ans, who anded in Boston from the ship N ary Lyon, November 3, 1631. It was hunded down as a family inheritance from him to his son, oseph Elio, who was graduated from Tarvard College in 1658; from aseph to his sor ared Ehot; from ared to his son ohn E iot; from ohn to his son Ecware Elist; from 2 ward to his son ohn E. Elliott, of Clinton, the six h in descent from "the apostle to the Indians." This old clock faithfully marked off; the noars, mont is an ayears, which the Nas-1 simility Eurot devoted to the translation of the B ble into the Indian language. Before this, transla ion could be made, or even begun, it was necessary to reduce the rude oral dialect of the intives to the form of a written language. The work was completed in 1663, and publish er at Cambridge, Mass. 1 'On'y sixty copies of this work are now in existence. The first one that was sold brought $1,356. The only min living that can read it is a Hammond Trumbill, o Hariford, Connecticut; -- Chea (-V.)': Herala.

Our sinsmen have to ask themse ves—and the question wi most orcib y suggested by many entures the display at Philade phia—whether they have made the pest use of their powers and opportunities in the comain of incustry and Mr. Risley proved that the resignation of the ever, is disastrous to tree growth, and cestroys | commerce. Their powers are unsurvassed, Secretary se accepted and that the thanks by the quaking Asp, Ceca, and even lines in their opportunities have never been equaled, but is the record of achievement who ly satisfactory? We are to a that "knowledge comes, out wiscom lingers," and many of the most inte ligent and public-spirited Americans do not nesitate to con ess, what seems ha have o impartia oreigners, that the forces of the nation have been often unprofitably spent and its chances thrown away under the strong delusion of a alse but plausible economic theory. In elicity and ecuncity of invention, in aucacity or enterprise and persevering energy, the Americans show themse ves at Parace. mia among the oremost, if not the first. But an examination of products and prices wil show
